One reason for the change was the shortfall in the grant programs. There have been more eligible students than funds, Olsen said.

But, he said the number of Stafford Loans has increased.

"The increase in loans offsets the amount that grants are being reduced," Olsen said.

The application process has not changed much, Olsen said.

The students simply apply on the application for federal student aid, and some students are selected for verification. If they are verified, they are required to turn in tax forms to determine if that data is accurate, then eligibility is processed at that point

Pell grants are still need-based and some of the factors involved in the decision process include state of residence, number of family members, adjusted gross income, amount of taxes paid and the number of family members in college,

Yeltsin refuses to compromise

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Boris Yeltsin ruled out any compromise Monday with hard-line lawmakers who remained barricaded in parliament with dwindling support and no electricity, hot water or telephones.

Yeltsin's tough stand and constant pressure from hundreds of flak-jacketed riot police appeared to be eroding the will of his opponents, who were weakened by defections and miserable conditions inside the Russian White House, or parliament building.

Speaking confidently on national TV, Yeltsin rejected proposals for simultaneous presidential and parliamentary elections as a way to end the stand-off that began when he dissolved parliament last week.

He insisted on sticking to his plan for a parliamentary election in December, with presidential balloting six months later. He said compromise was "doubly dangerous" and could lead to conflict.

"No. I am not making such compromises with any organs any more. I am categorically against it," Yeltsin said.

The lawmakers appealed to Russia's armed forces to revolt and oust Yeltsin, but the army stood firmly with the president. The crowd of anti-Yeltsin demonstrators manning the barricades outside parliament dwindled early Monday to about 200 people, but grew to about 2,000 by day's

In the morning, some lawmakers had a tough time reentering parliament. At one point, police threw one hard-liner over a barricade after he tried to break through the cordon. It was not known if he was injured. The police pressure took its toll on the jittery lawmakers.

Although Yeltsin repeatedly has said the building would not be stormed, parliament speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov claimed the building's defenders had prevented an attack early Monday.

"It is possible that another attempt will be made tonight," he told the lawmakers.

Some legislators bolted the hard-line cause and accepted job offers from

Seventy-six lawmakers accepted transfers to positions in the Yeltsin administration, and 114 more were prepared to negotiate their political futures, said Vyacheslav Volkov, Yeltsin's deputy chief of staff. Former KGB chief Viktor Barannikov denied reports that he would switch sides and leave the parliament, which has named him security minister in its shadow government.

The lawmakers, headed by Khasbulatov and Vice President Alexander Rutskoi, have been holed up in parliament since Yeltsin ordered the legislature dissolved Sept. 21 to end an 18-month power struggle that had paralyzed government.

Khasbulatov's parliament had tried to block the president's free-market reforms, saying they were causing undue hardship. Lawmakers also chipped away at Yeltsin's presidential

Clinton tells United Nations to know when to say 'no'

The Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — President Clinton told the U.N. Monday the American people will support sending U.S. troops to keep peace around the world only if new missions are sharply limited. "The United Nations must know when to say 'no," he declared.

Noting that he is the first president born after creation of the U.N., Clinton insisted on new rules for "new times" as he outlined his foreign policy views with a mixture of caution and high purpose.

Clinton is prepared to send as many as 25,000 American troops to Bosnia if peace terms can be worked out, and he defended keeping 4,700 U.S. peacekeepers in Somalia. He told the representatives of more than 180 nations that the U.N. must limit its involvement in international fighting, beginning "by bringing the rigors of military and political analysis to every U.N. peace mission."

He also proposed a network of nuclear arms restraints, including a worldwide ban on stockpiling of weaponsgrade uranium.

And he hinted he might abandon his three-month-old ban on underground weapons blasts if China resumed its test-

At a news conference later with Japanese Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa, Clinton said the United States sent peacekeepers to Somalia in December "with our eyes open" but "may have underestimated" the difficulty of restoring political stability. "I still believe President Bush made the right decision," he said.

He also listed conditions for deploying American forces to a NATO peacekeeping unit in Bosnia.

"I would want a clear understanding of what the command and control was and I would want the NATO commander in charge of the operations," Clinton said. "I would want a clear timetable for first review and ultimately for the right to terminate American involvement.'

Clinton said there would have to be "a clear political strategy" for the peacekeeping mission, and the deployment would have to be endorsed by Congress

We would have to know what our financial responsibilities are," the president said. "Then we would have to know that others would do their part as well." Clinton said none of the current peacekeeping missions were "ill founded" but that "there are limits to what we can do" in the future. "I want to see us go into these things with our eyes open," he said:

Clinton, in proposing curbs on mushrooming international peacekeeping ventures appeared to be looking for a practical way out of a growing dispute with members of Congress who are questioning American intervention in foreign conflicts.

The United Nations simply cannot become engaged in every one of the world's conflicts," Clinton said.

He said, the U.N. must have "the technical means to run a modern world-class peacekeeping operation." And he pledged that the United States intended to "remain engaged and to lead" in post-Cold War world affairs.

"They said he was forthright in his viewpoint but responded to an honest discussion of the evidence," Smoot said.

Knowlton's hearing is the seventh of eight hearings from faculty members who have appealed BYU's decision to either not grant them promotions or to deny them further employment, Academic Vice-President Todd Britsch said.

Cecilia Konchar Farr, the only other faculty member who decided to go public with her protest of the decision, is scheduled to have her appeals hearing Wednesday.

Five of the appeals were from faculty members whose continuing status was denied during their third-year

The council heard Knowlton's appeal for about half of the time. John Hawkins, head of the Anthropology Department, and J. Lynn England of the Sociology Department both spoke on behalf of Knowlton.

The department made a good defense, and basically said they wanted me to stay," Knowlton said.

A representative of the Faculty Council on Rank and Status received equal time to explain why the council made the decision to deny Knowlton continued employment. The meeting, scheduled to end at 5 p.m., went over until nearly 6 p.m.

The appeals hearing was not open to the public, and neither Knowlton nor University officials would discuss specifics about what went on. University officials say it will be between six to eight weeks before a decision is made.

Knowlton said he was confident the University reviewed the 1,020 pages of documentation he submitted as part of his appeal.

If the University decides not to continue Knowlton's employment, he may take the issue to court if he and his lawyer both feel it's in his best interest, he said.

If BYU grants him continued status, he said he's not sure if and how long he would stay.

"I care deeply about this University," Knowlton said. "I love my students. When I leave the University, I want to leave with good will and good feelings.

"There are problems here with academic freedom, but I think there are problems at every university,' Knowlton said.

After the Academic Vice-President's Council makes its recommendation, the final decision will ultimately rest on the shoulders of President Rex E. Lee and Provost Bruce C. Hafen.

Noah's experience instructive

By DANIEL C. PETERSON Special to the Universe

Members of the University community have the opportunity today to listen to and interact with one of the most remarkable thinkers in the contemporary United States, Professor Leon Richard Kass of the University of Chicago. At 11 a.m. in the Marriott Center, he will deliver a forum address entitled "Paternity and Piety: Noah and His Sons,' reflecting on the biblical story of Noah and what it can teach us about the relationship between children and parents. Earlier this morning, at 9:30 in 321 MSRB, Professor Kass will offer "A Biblical Perspective on Women's Issues." Ralph Hancock, an associate professor in BYU's Department of Political Science, will moderate that discussion, with Stephen D. Ricks, an associate professor of Asian and Near Eastern Languages, and Kristine Hansen, assistant professor of English, responding.

Leon Kass received his B.A. and M.D. from the University of Chicago and then earned a Ph.D. in biochemistry and molecular biology at Harvard — all well before the age of 30. He is currently Addie Clark Harding Professor in the College of the University of Chicago and a member of that university's famous Committee on Social Thought. His many articles, some of which were gathered in a 1985 book entitled Toward a More Natural Science: Biology and Human Affairs," have dealt with such timely and difficult questions as cloning, "test tube" babies and the nurturing of human life in the laboratory rather than the womb, potential abuse of pre-natal diagnoses and national health insur-

Officers in King beating free, for now

LOS ANGELES — Police officer Laurence Powell had already spent his first night in prison for the Rodney King beating and Sgt. Stacey Koon was just surrendering when a judge suddenly allowed them to go free Monday.

U.S. District Judge John G. Davies gave Powell and Koon about two weeks to appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, setting Oct. 12 as the new date for them to start serving their 2 1/2 year sentences.

Both men had faced a deadline of noon Monday for checking into the Dublin Federal Prison Camp, a converted military barracks without bars or fences 40 miles east of San Francisco.

"If Powell and Koon elect to they may walk out of the prison," said U.S. Marshal Craig Meacham in Los Angeles. "I expect they are going to make a Uturn and get out of there as fast as they can." It couldn't immediately be determined when they would go free.

Utah charity benefits from settlement

SALT LAKE CITY — The Utah chapter of the American Cancer Society will likely be the beneficiary of a nationwide settlement in an alleged price-fixng scheme by Keds Corp.

Utah Attorney General Jan Graham announced Monday that the state filed settlement papers in New York asking that Utah's $40,000 portion of the overall $7.2 million settlement go to help fund the society's anti-smoking cam-

"We're hoping to turn a violation of the law into something good for the people of Utah," Graham said in a news conference.

Keds, a subsidiary of Stride-Rite Corp., was accused of coercing retailers in 1992 into maintaining prices for its women's sneakers, and punishing those who didn't comply. Keds, while agreeing to pay the settlement, has not admitted any wrongdoing.

Purchasers, Graham said, paid an average of between $1 and $1.25 more than they would have if the price-maintenance scheme were not in place.

If a federal judge in New York approves the settlement, virtually all of the money will be donated to charities in the 50 states and District of Columbia, she said. The amount each state received was based on population.

Ex-convict charged with local crimes

By STEPHEN PARKER Universe Staff Writer

A woman was charged Monday with attempted strong-arm robbery, assault and retail theft following incidents at an Orem McDonald's parking lot and a convenience store.

Margaret Anselmo, 42, is accused of striking a 17year-old girl in the side of the head as she carried food items Friday from McDonald's, 15 N. State St., Orem Police Sgt. Gerald Nielsen said.

Nielsen said Anselmo grabbed the shoulder strap of the girl's purse and tried to tear it loose. She tore at the girl's hair and blouse, ripping hair out of her head, he said.

Nielsen said Anselmo fought the girl for the purse, striking her repeatedly and leaving her with abrasions and bruises on her face, shoulder and arm. Unable to wrestle the purse away from her victim, Anselmo fled the scene before police arrived, Within two hours of the robbery attempt, Orem police received a call about a shoplifter at the Larsen Kent Gasoline convenience store, 185 W. 400 North. A woman had exited the store with a burrito and salsa without paying, Nielsen said.

Police arrested a suspect and matched her v description of the suspect in the earlier atten-robbery, Nielsen said. The McDonald's victim tively identified Anselmo as her attacker, he sa Nielsen said Anselmo refused to provide with information about herself, However, found a notice in her possession showing sh recently released from jail, Nielsen said.

Anselmo was charged with a felony and two demeanors in the Orem Circuit Court Mo morning. She was assigned legal counsel an was posted at $3,000, Deputy Court Clerk E Wright said.

Drage deserves accolades

When Eric Drage set two BYU records during Saturday's game against Air Force, his efforts were accompanied by far too little fanfare.

School records come and go with some frequency, of course, but this case was different. These records were career records; Drage is now the most prolific receiver in BYU history in yards (2,675) and touchdown catches (27). Not only are these marks astounding on their own, they are also of a type that will last if not forever, then for many years to come.

For example, the old record for touchdown catches in a career was set by Phil Odle in 1967, before most BYU students were born, and more notably, before the Cougar football program became known as Air LaVell. Despite revolutionizing the passing game in college football since LaVell Edwards' arrival as head coach in 1972, no BYU receiver had broken Odle's record. The yardage record is similar. Odle held that mark as well, until Matt Bellini broke it by less than 100 yards in the 1980s. Drage will continue to add to his totals, setting a much more difficult standard for future Cougar receivers, a standard that could well include an NCAA record. If Drage catches passes for more than 1000 yards this season (he has 477 after Saturday's 213-yard outing), he will tie the NCAA record for 1000-yard seasons with three. Only three other receivers

Such accomplishments deserve more recognition, even in a team sport. The Daily Universe believes Saturday's game should have been stopped shortly for an appropriate announcement after each record was set, and Drage should have been ceremoniously awarded the footballs with which he set the marks.

Goodbye, Y. I won't be coming to school anymore, doctor's orders. No winter registration here or anywhere in Provo/Orem because it may kill me, literally. Yes, well, anaphylactic shock isn't that big of a deal, I know, if they get you to the hospital in time.

The cause? It's something called PM 10 and carbon monoxide. They both exceeded the federal standards 15 and seven days out of the year, on average, until the state had to impose restrictions. Last year it was five and three exceedences, respectively.

You don't know what these are? They're the tiny particulates and toxins that we all breath. It's why some people cough a lot and develop sinus problems, bronchitis, asthma and allergies. It's why SOME pediatricians tell people not to bring their infants outside when the air pollution index is high; their little bronchial tubes combined with mucous secretions might cause serious problems. (You can call 1-800-228-5434 for a daily report.)

I don't mean to cause a panic, put 2,600 Geneva Steel employees out of work (part of PM 10 content is due to meteors) or take away driving privileges. I just hope to raise awareness about potential health risks of living here and what we can do about it.

Asthma and it's mortality rates have increased dramatically in the last 10 years, and doctors have few explanations for it. Could it be because we keep heaping these pollutants upon our poor earth?

I just have a few suggestions: First, walk, ride the bus (375-INFO) or carpool (377-LIFT). The bus even goes up to Salt Lake (they drop you off right at Temple Square and you can study on the way). Second, if you have a suggestion about Geneva Steel, put in Third, (and this is for the BYU Traffic Office) come up with more worthwhile goals to cutting the CO levels. BYU students and employees are at least 20 percent of the Provo/Orem population; cut down on the number of drivers.

Hue about 'Blue'

By now, you have probably been asked to sign a petition, write a letter or join a picket to protest the local airing of NYPD Blue, television's first R-rated offering. Why all the fuss; why not "just turn it off?" There are two reasons that everyone ought to be concerned about the show. Lately, we have seen in the Universe the reports of the increase of rape. We are also all aware of the dangerous growth of gang violence. How many dozens of studies have we heard that absolutely link behavior to what is seen on TV?

If a show features female nudity — yes, the real honest-to-goodness nudity you see in Rrated movies, and if a show portrays graphic and frequent violence (NYPD is the first show to carry the new warning sign for violence) is a negative way? I think not. It seems to me we have plenty of violence and sex on the screen and way too much off the screen. Why more?

Now, to those who are crying "censorship!" I give a gentle reminder that the public and not the affiliates or the networks own the airwaves. They are considered public property and are leased to networks/affiliates by the FCC. It is not censorship for the public who owns the airwaves to decide they don't want a particular program shown. It is an exercise of First Amendment rights, as well as the majority rule. If this show were on cable, a private entity, it would be a different story.

If you haven't by now, please do one or all of the following: 1) Sign a petition at the table by the southeast corner of the library

TV not at fault

To the editor:

Your editorial analysis of NYPD Blue was narrow and reactionary. It was as if everyone on your editorial board let out a big gasp: "There's nudity on TV - and violence, too

Sex and violence aren't good, but we shouldn't start arresting network execs, either. You emphasized the legal issue. Yes, the FCC could pull licenses, but I'm not sure NYPD Blue is repulsive to most Americans. You may fear for children, but the show's on at night, and parents must take some responsibility. We can't force the majority of people to live our morality for the sake of a minority. It doesn't work. Prohibition is proof.

The networks show what sells. Programs like NYPD Blue reflect a large segment of real life. Besides, I'm not sure all violence in TV or the arts is bad. For example, in Macbeth, we learn that if you kill and take what's not yours, you'll be decapitated. In NYPD Blue, we learned that hurting people can result in being hurt. But even if it was gratuitous and disgusting, you don't have to watch it. Besides, aren't you blaming the wrong people for all the immorality in the world? How many people have a TV in Iraq or Bosnia? I watched as much or more TV growing up than any gang-banger in South Central L.A. Peer pressure and parenting decide more lives than any movie or TV show.

U.S. flag fettered

To the editor:

M. Heninger's article, "American swastika," was based entirely upon ignorant, unsubstantiated and judgmental information.

Although some people use the Confederate battle flag as a symbol of hatred and white supremacy, the flag itself does not represent these ideals. It is contemptuous to compare the Jews' endurance of Nazi camps, Russian pogroms and mass extinction to the Confederate flag. This flag is not a swastika and never will be a symbol of genocide. Even when taken at its worst, as a symbol of hatred and bigotry, it still pales in comparison to the torment of the Jews.

Let's step back through the windows of history and review the real meaning of this flag. Slavery under the Confederate flag only lasted about four years. However, to refresh our memory, under which flag was slavery practiced for nearly a century? The flag of the United States represents more acts of slavery and racial violence than the Confederate flag.

It must also be noted that many Confederate soldiers, who proudly carried their flag into battle, owned no slaves, were not bigots, did not believe in African genocide, were not racial oppressors and were opposed to slavery. These men had great loyalty and devotion to their respective states. Their flag was an emblem of loyalty, courage, honor, respect and brotherhood on the field of battle. If you can recall, some blacks even joined ranks with the Confederate Army. I don't think this would have been the case if the Confederate battle flag really symbolized their dehumanization.

Do we condemn the great pyramid symbols of hate, slavery, genocide ation of fiendish imps from Hade slaves built them? No, and we shou demn the Confederate battle flag in ner, either. Next time we see this flag it into proper perspective. Let's not to its connotation than it actually den things that we would regard as horrifc and inhuman. What, for example, are the broader implications of genetic engineering? When, in 1980, the United States Supreme Court granted an Illinois scientist ownership rights to a new strain of microorganisms (thus "patenting life"), it treated bacteria as merely "patentable matter," no different in principle from the other devices and compounds already covered under federal law. Was the Court really aware of what it was saying? Are living things truly just matter? And, in view of the fact that the various forms of life fall along a continuum, on what basis would the Court be able to prohibit a future scientist from claiming proprietary rights over new strains of plants, or animals, or even genetically engineered

Professor Kass points out that, when we speak of "the control of nature by science," we are really speaking of the control of nature by scientists. And, to the extent that modern science treats humans and human nature themselves as objects - note contemporary use of the quasi-industrial term "re-production" which contrasts sharply with the older and perhaps more reverent term "pro-creation" we are speaking of the control of some human beings by others. Modern science has profited greatly by its decision to treat nature as quantifiable and manipulable matter, but human beings must surely trouble us, and requires of us deep and prudent thought. It is not so much deliberate evil that we must guard against, says Professor Kass — although that too must be a concern — but thoughtless benevolence. As he says, "folly is much harder to detect than wickedness." We may, with all good will, be on the path to a dehumanizing "Brave New World.

Leon Kass has warned us for years, too, about a medicine that is fundamentally unsure of its purpose. Where once medicine seemed an art that aimed at the maintenance of restoration of health — a finite but important goal — many physicians now devote their practice to activities (e.g., cosmetic surgery, elective abortion and vasectomy, laboratory-facilitated conception, euthanasia) that have little or nothing to do with health as such, and may indeed, in the strictest sense of the word, be directly opposed to it.

Professor Kass is a brilliant and eloquent advocate of a natural science that leaves room for morality and humanity, "one truer to our experience" as human beings. As the titles of his presentations at BYU indicate, he takes family and lineage with utmost seriousness. His thought cuts across the biological sciences and philosophy and medical ethics to the core of what makes us distinctively human, and what must be maintained in order to maintain our dignity as

Communications students learn from professionals in women's organization

By GAYLON GARBETT Universe Staff Writer

The first meeting of Women in Communications, Inc., a campus organization for women at BYU who are involved in all communications fields, is today at 11 a.m. in the Department Communications Conference Room in the Harris Fine Arts Center.

Kathryn S. Egan, campus chapter adviser and a BYU associate professor in communications, says the organization is geared toward helping "anyone who is in communications and wants to make the transition from school to work."

According to a news release, Women in Communications, which is a national networking organization with about 12,000 students and professional members nationwide, is starting its fourth year at BYU.

Students taking part in the organization may participate in resume workshops, take tours of KBYU and KSL, spend time on the job with communications professionals and learn firsthand about communications fields from professionals

One of the activities planned resume clinic on Oct. 26 that will feature Margaret Smoot, director of BYU public communications.

Egan said another program sponsored by Women in Communications allows students to spend half a day with a professional in the field, giving students firsthand experience about the communications field in which they have interest.

Membership fee for the national organization is about $50.

Y professors' archaeology data By KIRSTEN SORENSON Senior Reporter

National Geographic to print

National Geographic will document the archeological work of several BYU professors in Egypt this winter.

Some of the team members include C. Wilfred Griggs, director of ancient studies; Dr. Scott Woodward, an associate professor in microbiology; and Marvin C.J. Kuchar, chair of the Clothing and Textiles Department.

While in Egypt the team will do work on three archeological sites: an ancient cemetery, some pyramids and mummies in the Egyptian Museum in Griggs said the team's work is important because it is a combination of disciplines laboring together to find all it can about ancient civilizations.

"Frankly, our site is not one of the most important sites in Egypt," he said, "but because of what we are doing there, the quality of work is really significant.'

For example, the project is genetically analyzing the royal mummies which are housed in the Egyptian Museum. Woodward said in the next year the team plans to analyze DNA samples from five royal mummies at the request of the Egyptian government and samples from 500 mummies or parts of mummies which are related to the royal mummies.

Woodward said they will extract DNA from the mummies, sequence the samples and compare them to see how closely the mummies are related and how often inbreeding was prac-

The group is also working on an ancient cemetery which entombed thousands of mummies.

Using DNA samples, burial clothing and reason for death, the group will try to find out the origin, religion and familial relationships of people buried

The idea of DNA analysis in inbreeding is important, Woodward said, because they can tell whether or not the people buried in the cemetery were Christians if the DNA shows ings for centuries.'

buried is also used to identify their religion, Kuchar said.

Kuchar is analyzing the designs found in the burial robes and garments and the dye method used. Clues from the markings and how symbols are combined could tell whether or not the people were Christians.

Griggs said they have found a lot of violence in death which is dated to the time of the persecution of Christians by Roman government.

"Fifty-eight percent of adult burials in the third and fourth centuries were killed violently," Griggs said. "Evidence suggests this is the first known archeological evidence of the persecution of Christians even though we've known about it through writ-

Griggs said that a second pyramid Clothing in which people were for Cheops has been discovered, as well as six pyramids for his father

"This points to the idea that they aren't just burial pyramids," he said. "What is the purpose of more than one pyramid if there can't be more than one burial chamber?

Griggs said another exciting discovery was under the main floor of the temple of Luxor.

As the temple started to decay, more than a dozen significant statues of pharaohs the world has never seen before came to light.

Y cadets assured jobs

By JOANN BRODERICK Universe Staff Writer

Undergraduate scholarship opportunities and a guaranteed job after graduation may be a far-fetched dream for some students, but not for many BYU Air Force ROTC cadets

"We are the only program on campus that can guarantee our cadets a job once they graduate," said Capt. Matthew Phillips of BYU's Air Force

Because the Air Force will commiswill have a guaranteed job in the Air Force if they fulfill the military requirements, said Col. Bob Atkinson, also of BYU's Air Force ROTC.

All the cadets who have gone through the ROTC program at BYU fulfill the requirements for getting a job within the Air Force, he said.

'The cadets don't have to worry about recruiters or filling out applications," Atkinson said. "They already have a job.'

"A lot of students are stressing out, wondering what they're going to do when they graduate," said Shawn Cotton, 23, BYU's Air Force ROTC cadet vice commander and a computer science major from Tooele.

"I'm not even looking for a job," Cotton said. "I know what I'm going cadets are not paid to go through the program, scholarships are always available to them, Phillips said. "About half of the cadets have scholarships," he said.

Although most students will find that the competition for Air Force ROTC scholarships is high, Phillips said the scholarships are comparably easier to obtain than a BYU scholar-

Every junior and senior in the program can apply for a $2,000 scholarship, Phillips said.

"This scholarship is just based on meeting certain criteria," he said. "This is different from an academic scholarship; it is non-competitive and available to any major.'

A cadet who has both a BYU scholarship and an ROTC scholarship has the opportunity to apply the ROTC scholarship toward tuition fees and cash in the BYU scholarship, Phillips

"We want to attract people into the program, but the cadets won't stay in the program just for the money," he said. "There is a huge commitment involved and the money is a minor convenience. After graduation, cadets are committed to serve four years active duty in the Air Force.

RUGBY STAR: All-American rugby player Mike Moe is currently in California to play on the United States national team that will play against Australia this weekend.

Cougar rugby player named All-American

By VALERIE BIRD Universe Sports Writer

Mike Moe, BYU's All-American rugby player and a member of the United States National rugby team, is in California this week to help the U.S. team get set to take on the Australian National rugby team on October 2nd.

Making the U.S. national team is equivalent to making the U.S. Olympic team and is a honor, said Larry Gelwix, Moe's high school coach at Highland in Salt Lake City.

Gelwix started the high school rugby program in Utah. As a result Moe was able to learn and play Moe started his high school rugby career at Orem High. When the program folded he opted to attend Highland High School to play on their rugby team.

Gelwix was able to see Moe grow and mature into the player he is today and was able to help him along the

"Mike is an outstanding player and a gifted athlete," Gelwix said. "In high school Mike was head and shoulders above the other players.'

Moe is only one of three athletes at Highland High to receive the "once in a lifetime player award" Gelwix said. Moe has previously played for the United of Provo team and the Pacific Coast Grizzlies and is in his first season with the Cougar rugby team.

Since BYU's season runs from September to November, he helps Gelwix coach the Highland High rugby team in the spring.

Moe was selected as an All-American when the coaches of the national team picked him from a rugby camp held during the summer.

The national team, known as the U.S. Eagles, competes on the international level. It is the team that plays in the Rugby World Cup, which takes place every three or four years. The U.S. National team has never beaten a top level team like Australia, New Zealand or England but has beaten second-level teams like Canada and Mexico.

Soccer team goes 5-0, wins weekend tourney

BYU started off the tournament with a 4-3 victory over Air Force. This is the only game of the entire tournament in which the Cougars were losing.

Coach Rich Egan felt that although it was a close game, the Cougars should have won more handily. Two of their goals came on free kicks.

The second round featured the host team of Northern Arizona University, and BYU spoiled their hopes of winning their own tournament by posting a 4-0 shutout. BYU also defeated Pepperdine by a score of 4-1, and Utah State by a score of 8-0en route to the finals.

New Mexico State defeated Air Force in the semi-finals to qualify to meet BYU in the championship game.

NMSU put up the biggest fight of any other team in the tournament. Although BYU went up by a score of 2-0, the Aggies fought back with a goal late in the game to bring the score within one. That proved to be the last goal of the game however, and the Cougar kickers finished with a 2-1 victory and a tournament championship.

BYU was very pleased with its play, especially the result of the new formation it incorporated on Friday. Goalkeeper Garrard Moren only allowed five goals in the five-game tournament.

The BYU men's cross country team out-jumped, out-climbed and out-ran their competition, taking first place at the Fourth Annual Mountain West Classic at Missoula, Mont., Saturday. The men's team scored 60 points, almost doubling second-place Virginia Tech's score of 117.

The men's course, an 8000-meter challenge consisting of pine logs, rocky terrain and one mountainous hill is designed to test the agility and stamina of the runners. off to a great start from last year."

Women golfers begin tourney

By TIM LOTT Universe Sports Writer

After being snowed out of the Jacoby Invitational in Laramie, Wyo., two weeks ago, the BYU women's golf team is anxious to get their season underway today at the fifth annual Dick McGuire Invitational in Albuquerque, N.M.

The McGuire Invitational has proved to be one of the toughest tournaments for the Cougars, boasting an 18-team field and four strong finish ers from the 1993 NCAA champi onships — Texas (2), San Jose State (3), Oklahoma (13) and Arizona (14). Cougar coach Gary Howard sees this tournament as an enormous chal-

"Since we couldn't play at Laramie, we're not going to be quite as prepared for this tournament as we'd like," Howard said.

"I expect us to finish in the middle of the pack.

Howard speaks of this week's trip to New Mexico as preparation for bigger things. "The WAC championships and NCAA regionals will be held on this course, so we're going down there to learn what we have to do to get ready for those tourna-

Lisa Christie, Golfweek's 1993-94 Preseason Third Team All-American will head this week's travel roster, followed by Ai Lian Lim, Kara Weitz, Stephanie Brockbank and Doreena

The previous choppers performed wonderfully, said Morrison, but were old. One was 20 years old, the other was 30. "We came to a point where, because of aging technology and difficulty of operational support, they needed to be replaced."

The new helicopters are specially designed for high-altitude, mountainous flying and will be more costeffective to operate than the previous

Life Flight nurse Jim Zobell said leasing the old choppers cost more than a straight purchase, especially since Life Flight racks up 30,000 miles a month.

Air speed is enhanced by 40 percent over the previous aircraft. The new helicopters climb 1,000 feet a minute, and during a special preview run with The Daily Universe, the chopper reached 170 mph.

The helicopters are part of a special air fleet that serves Utah hospitals, said Anton Garrity, spokesman for Utah Valley Regional Medical Independence High School in Provo, the only high school in the area practicing the year-round plan, is an alternative high school for kids struggling in the mainstream, said Principal Greg Hudnall.

Hudnall said students need to be in school more. Independence High School is proposing a 220-day school

Some people say year-round school can also provide benefits to teachers. "I don't think they get burned out as easily under this program," Carter

Teachers can extend their contracts with the multi-track system, which makes teaching more of a full-time job, said Todd Billings, instructional facilitator at Timpanogos Elementary School in Provo.

However, teachers have to become very mobile with the rotation process the year-round plan necessitates, Billings said.

The major complaint with the yearround plan comes from parents who have children attending both secondary and elementary level schools. It makes it difficult for families to correlate the different school schedules and plan activities together, Billings said.

U.S. government has awarded contracts to firms being probed

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The government awarded at least $27.1 million in recent savings and loan cleanup contracts to two accounting firms it was simultaneously investigating for contributing to thrift failures, documents.

The rules for the Resolution Trust Corp. say firms cannot receive new business if they are being sued, have caused losses of more than $50,000 or are under investigation for contributing to S&L failures.

New York-based Coopers & Lybrand was awarded 25 contracts worth $22.6 million from January 1992 to July 1993.

During that time period, the company was under investigation in the failure of a New Mexico thrift, according to RTC documents reviewed by The Associated Press.

A second firm, Chicago-based Grant Thornton, received 17 contracts worth $4.5 million over the same period even though it had been sued in one thrift failure in 1989 and remains under investigation in another, the documents showed

Although the regulations provide for waivers to allow such firms to get new business, the RTC granted waivers for only two of the 42 con-

A member of the House committee that oversees RTC expressed outrage that such firms are getting contracts and escaping the waiver process.

"We were pretty dead serious that those that caused this problem should not be benefiting from this," said Rep. Bruce Vento, D-Minn.; a member of the House Banking Committee.

'We set up a common-sense waiver process, and when you look at examples like this, it's pretty clear they have chosen to disregard it," Vento

"The way we work ... is we don't take any adverse action against the contractor until the lawsuit is filed, said Marty Blumenthal, RTC's manager of contractor ethics.

'The fact that there may be an investigation is not something that generates any adverse action until that lawsuit is actually filed," he said.

Coopers settled the matter last month by agreeing to pay $3.9 million to the government without admitting wrongdoing, according to a confidential RTC report obtained by AP.

"At least with us, we follow the rules, and they make us follow them, insisted Mike O'Neill, who handles RTC accounts for Coopers. "If there is any sort of issue or claim filed against us, we don't do business with

"Paternity and Piety: Noah and His Sons"

How should children regard their parents: as objects of awe and reverence or as friends and equals? How must parents behave in order to insure the respect of their children? How should children act when their parents disgrace themselves? In this lecture, Dr. Kass considers these important and enduring questions largely by means of a careful examination of the biblical story of Noah and his sons, as told in Genesis 9:18-27.

Dr. Leon Richard Kass earned his PhD in biochemistry from Harvard University in 1967. Dr. Kass has been a senior staff fellow at the National Institutes of Health (Bethesda, Maryland), has been a Joseph P. Kennedy, Sr., Research Professor in Bioethics at Georgetown University, and recently fulfilled a William H. Brady, Jr., Distinguished Fellowship at the American Enterprise Institute in Washington, D.C. He has been a surgeon for the U.S. Public Health Service, has served on numerous professional boards and committees, and has published extensively in the medical research field.

Timpanogos tours end early

By SHANNON REED Universe Lifestyle Writer

Funding for Timpanogos Cave National Monument provided by the federal government is growing smaller and smaller causing the season to grow shorter as the years go by

"We had a shorter season this year because funding has not increased due to the continuing problem of lack of budget," said Sue McGill, superintendent of Timpanogos Cave.

A normal season for Timpanogos Cave is somewhere toward the end of April until mid-October, McGill

This year's season ran from Memorial Day through Labor Day. Daily tours are the only way to see the caves and are provided by National Park Service rangers.

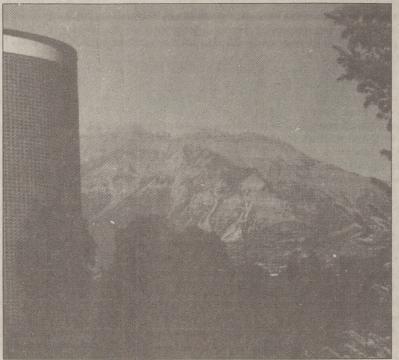

An estimated 70,000 tourists visited the park this summer. These numbers are lower than the number of tourists that visited last year by 10,000 and is most likely due to the shorter season, McGill said.

Timpanogos Cave employees are planning on operating next summer but are still unsure of when the season will run.

"We have not received the approbation for the 1994 season and don't know the opening dates yet," McGill said.

The cave still runs the same services but the amount of money keeps being reduced and the budget won't see increases, McGill park has no effect on how much money the park receives. Fees from the visitors do not go to the park but are sent to a general fund in Washington D.C. Most likely the entrance fees for the 1994 season will not go up, McGill said.

"I think national parks and monuments need to be preserved, so the budget shouldn't be cut," said Jody

Turner, a senior psychology major from Bountiful.

Timpanogos Cave is made-up of calcium and helictite deposits that make the unique formations. There are actually three different caves with man-made tunnels connecting them. A 1.5-mile hike is required to get to the caves.

Woman in Mind' portrays women's issues

By GRO AMANDA MATLAND

Universe Lifestyle Writer

"Woman in Mind" is a play by Alan ourn that depicts how a woman de? s with her mid-life struggles and poblems.

The author describes Susan, the main character, as "an unassuming woman in her forties, used to and happy to play second fiddle to more determinedly motivated personalities than her own.

The play tells a story of a woman who, after her son is out of the nest, realizes that sacrificing for her family has not resulted in happiness.

After Susan realizes the failures in her relationship with her husband and son, she establishes "perfect" relationships to the members of her imaginary family who give her all the love and respect her real family doesn't give her.

As the play evolves, Susan escapes more frequently into her fantasy world, which eventually consumes her sanity.

The story is told from Susan's point of view and the audience experiences her inner world of thoughts, desires and emotions.

Imaginary people are mixed with people on stage because Ayckbourn said he wants the audiof a woman who is "loosing it."

Bob Nelson, director of the play, said he liked the play's explanation of a dysfunctional family.

"It is a timely and important play because of female issues," Nelson

"The play raises some questionsquestions of what it means to be a wife and a mother in a traditional family in the latter part of the 20th century and whether the role of a mother and a homemaker is valued highly enough," Nelson said.

The play is now playing in the Margretts Theatre and will run until

Y students promote jazz music for fun

By MARISSA YOUNG Universe Lifestyle Writer

Two BYU students stood next to using their musical talents to increase their cash flow.

Similar to two "open-cased" musicians playing for money on a street corner in New York City, Lyle Durland, 25, a music composition major from Tacoma, Wash. and Brady Ward, 21, a math education major from Salem, Ore., played the trombone and acoustic bass, respectively, in hopes of earning a little laundry money while playing some of their favorite jazz selections.

After playing for about an hour, each student made approximately

"Considering that we played for the Tree of Life Friday afternoon only 50 minutes, that's above minusing their musical talents to imum wage," Durland said.

"But we do it mostly for fun anyway," he added

The two musicians hope to play every Friday afternoon next to the Tree of Life

They will play jazz selections from various decades, with some of their songs dating back to the 1930s and 1940s.

"I think there should be some kind of tradition on campus like this to help increase jazz appreciation," Durland said.
